FOOTNOTES TO REFERENCE NOS. IN COLUMN HEADINGS

[1] The association year begins after the end of the last annual meeting

[2] A name shown in parentheses indicates the re-election of the officer or the selection of the person to continue in the office, if in brackets, the person continued in office for another association year because no annual meeting of the association was convened

[3] The early chairpersons of the Comitia Minora are not known

[4] The combination of offices of Secretary and Editor provided for the initial central Office of the Association (Detroit) in January 1923. Earlier, the association records and editorial materials were kept at the home residences of Secretaries and Editors, although for many years, a Librarian was elected to keep the records

[5] The Association established the American Veterinary Review as its house organ, first published in January 1877, and later relinquished its ownership by gift to the Editor. In October 1915, the American Veterinary Review was purchased and renamed the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

[6] The listing does not include the semi-annual meetings of USVMA held between 1864 (January 19, first) and 1889 (March 19, last)

[7] The expression "designated serial No" of the Annual Meetings is used because the Association refers to the "-Annual Meeting" in official announcements and publications. There were no annual meetings in 1874 (11th), 1914 (51st), and 1945 (82nd, executive and legislative sessions only). The 12th Annual Meeting in 1875 would have been more correctly termed the 12th anniversary meeting

[8] The Annual Meeting dates beginning in the 1930s are different from those shown in the older. AVMA Directories and the usual published announcements in order to improve their usefulness to the membership. The original dates marked the start of the Annual Meeting in terms of the day of the first full-convention business session, the day of the ceremonial "opening" or "plenary" session, or the first day of sectional or scientific sessions and opening of the exhibition area. These original dates do not reflect the dates of the business transactions of the Association, however. Thus, the original dates are retained in the present table, but are amended with meeting dates of the AVMA House of Delegates (successor to the AVMA House of Representatives) shown with the asterisk (first meeting August 15-16, 1934, T.E. Munice, chairperson)

CENTRAL OFFICE LOCATIONS OF AVMA

Since 1975, AVMA has operated from its own 20,000 square foot office building in Schaumburg, Illinois. Earlier, the Association used leased office space in Detroit (1923 to 1932) and Chicago (1932-1975). The Chicago office locations were 1230 Washington Boulevard (Prairie Farmer Building, 1932-1933); 221 North LaSalle Street (LaSalle-Wacker Building, 1933-1940); and 600 South Michigan Avenue (Fairbanks-Morse Building, 1940-1975).

AVMA decided in 1970 to construct its own office building and on July 6, 1973 broke ground for the present office in suburban Schaumburg. The Association moved into the building on February 28, 1975.

In 1953, the AVMA's legislative-liaison office was established in Washington D.C. It moved from its first leased office at 1507 M Street NW to 1522 K Street NW in 1966. In 1987, the office was renamed the AVMA Governmental Relations Division and in 1988 relocated to 1023 Fifteenth Street, NW.

NOTES:

1. This table presents AVMA Executive Board membership since the Board was constituted in its present form in 1969.
2. The Executive Board is comprised of the eleven district representatives plus the president, president-elect, immediate past president, vice president, and treasurer. The latter officers are identified in the preceding table.
3. Heavy lines indicate the beginning and end of full 6 year terms. Changes within those terms are the result of special elections held to fill vacancies caused by death or registration of the incumbent.

[1] The sixteen-year interval between the third and fourth Congresses was caused by the Franco-Prussian War and unsettled conditions in Europe following it.

[2] The tenth Congress had to adjourn after the first day because of the outbreak of World War 1. There was then another sixteen-year interval before the eleventh Congress was held.

[3] The eleven-year interval between the thirteenth and fourteenth Congresses was caused by the outbreak of World War 11, the fourteenth having been scheduled for Berlin in 1942.

AMERICAN VETERINARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION CONSTITUTION

Article I - Title

Section I- The Association shall be known as the American Veterinary Medical Association and shall be incorporated under the laws of the General Not for Profit Corporation Act of the State of Illinois.

Section II- The Association shall forever remain a not-for-profit organization in fact, and its officers shall comply with the laws of the state in which the Association is incorporated.

Section III- Whenever a provision of this Constitution is inconsistent with a provision of the related Bylaws, the provision in the Constitution shall be controlling.

Article II - Objective

The objective of the Association is to advance the science and art of veterinary medicine, including its relationship to public health and agriculture. The Association provides a forum for the discussion of issues of importance to the veterinary profession, and for the development of official positions. The Association is the authorized voice for the profession in presenting its views to government, academia, agriculture, pet owners, the media, and other concerned publics.

Article III - Members

Section 1 - Active Members. - Active members in the Association shall be those graduates of colleges and schools of veterinary medicine who meet the qualifications specified from time to time in the Bylaws of the Association.

Section 2 - Other Members. - The Bylaws may also provide for, and specify, the qualifications for other classes of members in the Association.

Section 3 - Tenure. - Members of the Association shall retain their membership only so long as they comply with the provisions of the Constitution, Bylaws, and Principles of Ethics of the Association.

Article IV - Officers

Section 1 - Number. - The officers of the Association shall be a president, president-elect, vice president, secretary, assistant secretary, executive vice president, assistant executive vice president, treasurer, and such other officers as the Bylaws may from time to time specify; provided however, that the executive vice president and the assistant executive vice president shall also perform the duties normally expected of the secretary and assistant secretary, respectively, of an Illinois not-for-profit corporation.

Section 2 - Qualification. - The president, president-elect, and vice president must be active members of the Association for at least ten years immediately prior to their election. All other officers must be active members of the Association immediately prior to their election.

Section 3 - President, President-Elect and Vice President - Election Term, and Succession. - A vice president and a president-elect shall be elected at each annual session. Except as otherwise provided in Sections 4 or 5, the terms of the president, president-elect, and vice president shall commence at the end of the annual session at which they are elected or, in the case of a president who succeeds automatically to such office, and shall terminate at the end of the following annual session. Except as otherwise provided in Section 4 or 5, at the end of his term of office the president-elect immediately and automatically shall succeed to the office of and become president.

Section 4 - Death, Resignation, or Removal of the President. - If the president dies, resigns, or is otherwise removed from office, the president-elect immediately and automatically shall succeed to the office of and become president and shall serve as president for the remainder of the president's term as set forth in Section 3; provided that, if the remainder of the president's term is less than six months and if such officer was elected president-elect at the immediately preceding annual session (rather than having succeeded automatically to such office pursuant to Section 5), such officer shall continue to serve as president until the end of the second annual session following the time at which he succeeds to the office of president. If the remainder of the president's term is six months or more or, regardless of the length of time of the remainder of the president's term, if the president-elect succeeds to such office pursuant to Section 5 (rather than having been elected thereto at the immediately preceding annual session), a president (in addition to a president-elect and vice-president) shall be elected at the annual session following the time at which the president-elect succeeds to the office of president. If the president dies, resigns, or is otherwise removed from office and there is no president-elect then in office, the Executive Board shall elect a person to fill the office of president (in addition to a president-elect and a vice president) shall be elected at the annual session following the time the Executive Board elects such person to the office of president.

Section 5 - Death, Resignation, Removal, or Succession of the President-Elect. - If the president-elect dies, resigns, becomes president pursuant to Section 4, or is otherwise removed from office, the vice president immediately and automatically shall succeed to the office of and become president-elect and shall serve as president-elect only for the remainder of the president-elect's term as set forth in Section 3. Such officer shall not automatically succeed to the office of president thereafter.

Section 6 - Other Officers - Election and Term. - An executive vice president, assistant executive vice president, treasurer, and such other officers as the Bylaws may specify shall be elected annually by the Executive Board before the annual session with terms commencing at the end of the annual session following the meeting of the Executive Board at which they are elected and terminating at the end of the next following annual session.

Article V - Executive Board

Section 1 - Duties. - The Executive Board shall be the administrative body of the Association. It shall have charge of the property and financial affairs of the Association, including the management of all of its publications, and trusts, and shall perform such duties as may be prescribed from time to time in the Bylaws. The Executive Board shall report on its actions to the House of Delegates.

Section 2 - Qualifications. - An Executive Board member must have been an active member of the Association for at least five years immediately prior to his nomination and must reside in the district in which he is nominated and elected.

Section 3 - Election and Term. - Executive Board members shall be elected as provided in the Bylaws for terms of approximately six years. Their terms shall expire at the close of the sixth annual session following their installation.

Section 4 - Board of Governors. - The Board of Governors shall be composed of the president, president-elect, and the chairman of the Executive Board. It shall act for the Executive Board between its regular meetings and shall hold meetings at such times and places as the chairman of the Executive Board may direct. In case of a vacancy on the Board of Governors, the Executive Board shall designate one of its members to fill the remainder of the term resulting from the vacancy.

Article VI - House of Delegates

Section 1 - Duties. - (a) The House of Delegates shall be the legislative body of the Association and shall, in principle, be the voice of the active members.

b) Meetings of the House of Delegates shall be in accordance with the provisions of the Bylaws and conducted according to Roberts Rules of Order, Revised. No matter shall be acted upon finally by the House unless that matter has been considered and reported upon by either the Executive Board or the House Advisory Committee. Any matter referred to said Board or Committee for such consideration must be reported upon by said Board or Committee either at the annual session during which the matter is so referred or at the next following annual session.

c) Resolutions may be received from the AVMA Executive Board, AVMA Councils, organizations represented in the House of Delegates, or from individual members when accompanied by signatures of twenty five active members of the Association.

AMERICAN VETERINARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION CONSTITUTION (Cont.) & BYLAWS

No resolution proposed for the consideration of the House of Delegates shall be considered at an annual meeting unless it shall have been delivered to the executive vice president no later than May 1 of the year of the annual meeting at which it is proposed for consideration. Resolutions so received will be mailed to the delegates no less than sixty days prior to the annual meeting. This provision shall not affect other articles of this Constitution and Bylaws as they pertain to amendments. Any notice of proposed matters published in the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association no less than sixty days prior to the annual meeting shall satisfy this provision. The provisions of this section governing the delivery and mailing or publishing of resolutions may be waived by a two-thirds majority of the votes cast by the delegates registered and voting at the meeting.

Section 2 - Composition. - (a) The House of Delegates shall be composed of delegates, alternate delegates, and ex officio members. All members of the House must be members in good standing of the Association.

b) One delegate shall represent the principal veterinary organization of each state (including the District of Columbia), territory, and possession of the United States as determined by the Executive Board, and each allied organization of veterinarians the Executive Board, with the approval of the House of Delegates, deems entitled to representation. One delegate shall represent the AVMA members who are in the Uniformed Services of the United States, including the Army, the Air Force and the Public Health Service. The number, selection, tenure, certification, and voting power of the delegates shall be in accordance with the provisions of the Bylaws.

c) An alternate delegate shall be named and duly certified by each organization represented. An alternate delegate will perform the functions of a delegate when the delegate for whom he is an alternate is absent or designates the alternate delegate to act for him. The number, selection, tenure, and certification of alternate delegates shall be in accordance with the provisions of the Bylaws.

d) Ex officio members shall be the officers of AVMA, members of the Executive Board of AVMA, the editor-in-chief of the AVMA publications, and the president and president-elect of the Student AVMA. Ex officio members shall not have the right to vote, except that the presiding officer shall have the right to cast one vote in the event that the vote of the house results in a tie.

Article VII - Principal Veterinary Organizations

A veterinary association representing each state (including the District of Columbia), territory, and possession of the United States, which is organized in conformity with the general administrative plan of the Association, as determined by the Executive Board and approved by the House of Delegates, shall be recognized as the principal veterinary organization and shall be entitled to representation in the House of Delegates.

Article VIII - Student Organizations

The Board of Directors may fill any vacancy or any new office at any meeting of the Board. Any two or more offices may be held by the same person, except the offices of President and Secretary.

Section 2 - President. - The President shall be the principal executive officer of the Corporation and shall in general supervise its affairs. He shall serve as Chairman of the Board of Directors. He may sign with the Secretary, or any other officer so authorized by the Board of Directors, all documents which the Board of Directors shall have authorized to be executed, except in cases where the signing and execution thereof shall be expressly delegated by the Board of Directors or by statute of some other officer or agent of the Corporation, and in general shall perform all duties incident to the office of President and such other duties as may be prescribed by the Board of Directors.

Section 3 - Vice Presidents. - The Vice President (or Vice Presidents, in the order of their designation if seniority be designated, or in the order of their election, or in the order named for election) shall in the absence or disability of the President perform the duties of the President, and while so acting, shall have all the powers of the President. PRINCIPLES OF VETERINARY MEDICAL ETHICS OPINIONS AND REPORTS OF THE JUDICIAL COUNCIL

(1988 Revision)

Section 1: Introduction

The document that provides for the regulation of professional behavior of veterinarians in the United States in the Principles of Veterinary Medical Ethics. Adopted in 1960, the Principles replaced the 1940 Code of Veterinary Medical Ethics and the 1952 edition of the Principles, both of which lacked specificity and were regarded by many veterinarians as a guide to etiquette rather than statements of principles. Those who had to interpret and enforce the 1940 Code and the 1952 Principles were constantly faced with the task of rendering opinions on individual questions where those documents were not specific, so the Judicial Council, soon after it was formed in 1958, set about drafting a simple, understandable set of ethical principles. The House of Delegates adopted the final document in 1960. In 1983, the Principles were revised to reflect fundamental concepts and guidelines.

To the 1960 Principles, the Council appended rulings and interpretations to help members and ethics committees attain full understanding of the new concept of setting forth ethical principles. Nevertheless, interpretation and application of the new Principles raised many questions, so the Council has subsequently issued a number of specific and clarifying annotations. With adoption of new advertising regulations by the House of Delegates in 1978, the Judicial Council prepared this new edition of the annotated Principles.

In dealing with questions of ethics, a committee on veterinary medical ethics must attempt to interpret the spirit and intent of the Principles, but it is the incorporated annotations that most often serve as the basis for resolving specific problems.

Relationship of Local, State, and National Associations on the Matter of Ethics

Ideally, all questions of ethical behavior on the part of a veterinarian should be considered and dealt with by the local association's ethics or grievance committee, the members of which should be familiar with local customs and circumstances and are in a position to talk to all parties concerned. In some instances, a solution at the local level may be impossible and referral to the ethics committee of the state association maybe advisable. Occasionally, a problem not resolved at either local or state levels should be considered by the AVMA Judicial Council, but the Council should not be used by ethics committees as a means of avoiding disagreeable tasks. Nor should the Council be saddled with handling of minutiae. Having issued annotations, it should be left free to deal with such broader problems as admission and dismissal of AVMA members, interpretation of the Constitution and Bylaws and the Principles of Veterinary Medical Ethics, study of professional conditions, and preparation of annotations.

It's Attitude That Counts

The Principles of Veterinary Medical Ethics are purposely constructed in a general and broad manner, but veterinarians who accept the Golden Rule as a guide for general conduct and make a reasonable effort to abide by the Principles of Veterinary Medical Ethics in professional life will have little difficulty with ethics. Those whose aggressiveness and promotional tendencies cause them to run afoul of the Principles would probably have the same difficulty under more specific rules.

Purportedly, veterinary medicine is an ennobling profession. The Principles light the path to that ennoblement.

Principles of Veterinary Medical Ethics

Briefly stated, our code of ethics is the foundation of our individual and collective efforts. It is based on the Golden Rule.

Part 1 - The principal objectives of the veterinary profession are to render service to society, to conserve our livestock resources, and to prevent and relieve suffering of animals. Veterinarians should conduct themselves in relation to the public, their colleagues and their patients, and the allied professions, so as to merit their full confidence and respect.

Part 2 - Veterinarians may choose whom they will serve. Once they have undertaken care of a patient they must not neglect the patient. In an emergency, however, they should render service to the best of their ability. They should not solicit clients, nor announce fees and services in such a manner as to be misleading, fraudulent, or deceptive.

Part 3 - Veterinarians should not employ professional knowledge and attainments nor dispose of services under terms and conditions which tend to interfere with the free exercise of judgment and skill or tend to cause a deterioration of the quality of veterinary service.

Part 4 - Veterinarians should strive continually to improve veterinary knowledge and skill, making available to their colleagues the benefit of their professional attainments, and seeking, through consultation, assistance of others when it appears that the quality of Veterinary service may be enhanced thereby.

Part 5 - The veterinary profession should safeguard the public and itself against veterinarians deficient in moral character or professional competence. Veterinarians should observe all laws, uphold the honor and dignity of the profession, and accept its self-imposed discipline.

Part 6 - The responsibilities of the veterinary profession extend not only the patient but also to society. The health of the community as well as the patient deserves the veterinarian's interest and participation in nonprofessional activities and organizations.

Section 2: Fundamental Concepts

The honor and dignity of our profession lie in our obedience to a just and reasonable code of ethics set forth as a guide to the members. The object of this code, however, is more far-reaching, for exemplary professional conduct not only upholds honor and dignity, but also enlarges our sphere of usefulness, exalts our social standards and promotes the science we cultivate. Briefly stated, our code of ethics is the foundation of our individual and collective efforts. It is based on the Golden Rule.

It is the solemn duty of all members of the Association to deport themselves in accordance with the spirit of this code.

This code is not intended to cover the entire field of veterinary medical ethics. Professional life is too complex to classify one's duties and obligations to clients, colleagues, and fellow citizens into a set of rules.

Deportment

Members shall not use a college degree to which they are not entitled or any degree or title granted by an institution declared unworthy by contemporary institutions of its class.

No member shall belittle or injure the professional standing of another member of the profession or unnecessarily condemn the character of that person's professional acts.

Frauds

Members of the Association shall avoid the impropriety of employing questionable methods to attract public attention.

When employed by the buyer to inspect an animal for soundness, it is unethical to accept a fee from the seller. The acceptance of such a fee is prima facie evidence of fraud. On the other hand, it is deemed unethical to criticize unfairly an animal about to be sold. The veterinarian's duty in this connection is to be a just and honest referee.

When veterinarians know that surgery has been requested with intent to deceive a third party, they will have engaged in an unethical practice if they perform or participate in the operation.

Guarantee Cures

It is unethical to guarantee a cure.

Secret Remedies

It is unethical and unprofessional for veterinarians to promote, sell, prescribe, or use any product the ingredient formula of which has not been revealed to them.

Genetic Defects

Performance of surgical procedures in all species for the purpose of concealing genetic defects in animals to be shown, raced, bred, or sold as breeding animals is unethical. However, should the health or welfare of the individual patient require correction of such genetic defects, it is recommended that the patient be rendered incapable of reproduction.

Alliance with Unqualified Persons

No member shall willfully place professional knowledge, attainments, or services at the disposal of any lay body, organization, group or individual by whatever name called, or however organized, for the purpose of encouraging unqualified groups and individuals to diagnose and prescribe for the ailments and diseases of animals. Such conduct is especially reprehensible when it is done to promote commercial interests and monetary gain. Such deportment is beneath the dignity of professional ethics and practice; it can be harmful to both the welfare of the animal-owning public and the veterinary profession; it violates principles of humane animal care; it may cause great economic loss and endanger public health and is, therefore, contrary to sound public policy.

Commissions, Rebates, or Kickbacks

It is unethical for a veterinarian to solicit or accept a commission, rebate, or kickback in connection with a recommendation of, or referral of a client to, purveyors of merchandise or services such as dog food, cremation or burial services, caskets, urns, insurance, breeding stock, and livestock supplies.

Testimonials and Endorsements

It is appropriate for AVMA members to report the results of properly controlled experiments of clinical studies, such reports to be publicized through scientific journals or scientific meetings of professional associations. However, testimonials and endorsements by members of the AVMA pertaining to veterinary products, veterinary services, or veterinary equipment shall comply with the following requirements:

a) Endorsements may not contain any representations which can not be substantiated by the advertiser.

b) Where the endorsement represents that the endorser uses the endorsed product, the endorser must be a bona fide user of the product.

c) There must be adequate substantiation that the endorser's experience with the product is representative of what consumers will generally achieve with the advertised product in actual conditions of use.

d) An expert endorser's qualifications must in fact give him the expertise that he is represented as possessing with respect to the endorsement.

e) An expert's endorsement must be supported by an actual exercise of his expertise in evaluating product features or characteristics with respect to which he is expert, including an examination or testing of the product at least as extensive as someone with the same degree of expertise would normally need to conduct to support the conclusions presented in the endorsement.

f) Where there exists a connection between the endorser and the seller of the advertised product which might materially affect the weight or credibility of the endorsement, such connection must be fully disclosed.

No member or employee of the American Veterinary Medical Association shall use the name of the Association in connection with the promotion or advertising of any commercial product or commercial service, or in any that would imply American Veterinary Medical Association endorsement of such a product or service, without written permission from the Board of Governors or the Executive Board.

The allying of any veterinarian with a private kennel for the purpose of lending a name either in fact or by inference, in order for the kennel to advertise "under veterinary supervision," would perforce be considered unethical.

Consultations

When a fellow practitioner or diagnostic, research, or laboratory veterinarian is called into consultation by the attending veterinarians, findings and discussions with the client shall be handled in such a manner as to avoid criticism of the attending veterinarian by the client.

Consultants shall not revisit the patient or client or communicate directly with the client without the knowledge of the attending veterinarian.

Diagnostic, research, and laboratory veterinarians in the role of consultants shall deport themselves in the same manner as fellow practitioners whether they are private, commercial, or public functionaries.

In no instance and under no circumstances shall a consultant take charge of a case or problem without the consent of all concerned.

Definitions of Professional and Nonprofessional Products

A professional product is one in which professional veterinary knowledge is indicated whether in the administration of or in the giving of instructions for the safe, proper, and prudent use of the product. Professional veterinary products include, but are not limited to biologicals, pharmaceuticals, parasiticides, and prescription diets.

A nonprofessional product is one that is considered safe for use by the public, without professional instruction. Such products include, but are not limited to, nonprescription commercial diet foods, grooming aids, and restraint equipment.

Dispensing Versus Merchandising

Dispensing has been interpreted to mean providing veterinary products for lay use, only on the supposition that the veterinarian has had knowledge of the particular case or general conditions which apply to the particular farm or kennel. In the veterinarian's office it becomes the distributing of professional veterinary products by virtue of verbal information presented by the owner, as an adjunct to the knowledge gained previously by the practitioner. This is in contrast to the written prescription as a service by the pharmacist.

Merchandising is buying and selling of professional veterinary products without due consideration for the patient receiving such products.

Merchandising by the veterinary profession is unethical.

Sale of Ethical Veterinary Products and Veterinary Prescription Drugs

Commercial firms that have a policy of sales to veterinarians only are known as "ethical" firms and their products as "ethical" products. Such a sales policy has no legal basis and therefore has no legal protection. However, many veterinarians prefer to use the socalled "ethical" products and believe that the sales policy should be respected by the profession.

It is unethical for veterinarians to use their names or permit the use of their names in connection with the purchase of "ethical" products for resale by a commercial distributor to animal owners. It is also unethical for veterinarians to arrange with a commercial distributor to mail prescription drugs directly to animal owners without examining the affected animals and making a diagnosis.

Fees for Service

In determining fees for services rendered, the veterinarian may be expected to consider the nature of the condition, the time, the expense of other resources applicable to the case, and the client's ability to pay.

It is unethical for a veterinarian to participate in fee splitting and rebating or to accept or pay a fee in connection with referrals.

It is not permissible for a veterinary association to take any action which would have the effect of coercing, pressuring or achieving agreement among veterinarians to conform to fixed fees or a fee schedule.

When a veterinarian agrees to provide veterinary services, the quality of service must be maintained at the usual high professional level, regardless of the fees charged, if any.

Compliance with Law

Members shall comply with the common law governing their obligations to their clients and shall obey, without obvious fault, the official public relations and laws governing their acts.

The issuing of false certificates of health on official documents is unethical and noncompliance with official regulations that the veterinarian is entrusted to enforce is deemed a violation of professional honesty.

The records of a veterinary facility are the sole property of that facility, and when a veterinarian leaves salaried employment therein, the departing veterinarian shall not copy, remove, or make any subsequent use of those records.

Members of the Association shall not indulge in illegal practices, such as practicing without procuring a license or teaching others to do so in violation of the laws governing the practice of veterinary medicine.

It is the duty of members of the Association to report illegal practices to the proper authorities and to report such practices by members of the Association to the Executive Board.

Advertising Regulations

Advertising means newspaper, magazine, and periodical announcements and listings; professional cards, professional announcement cards; office and other signs; letterheads; telephone and other directory listings; and any other form of communication designed to inform the general public about the availability, nature, or prices of products or services or to attract clients.

Solicitation means advertising intentionally directed to specific individuals.

Written solicitation is permissible provided it does not exert undue influence, pressure for immediate response, intimidation, or overreaching. Oral or in-person solicitation, although permissible with the foregoing caveats, is nevertheless undesirable because its very nature provides no evidence that can be examined by a regulatory body.

A veterinarian shall not on behalf of himself, his partner, his association, or any other veterinarian use or participate in the use of, any form of advertising or solicitation which contains a false, deceptive, or misleading statement or claim.

A false, deceptive, or misleading statement or claim includes, without limitation, a statement or claim which:

1) contains a prediction of future success or guarantees that satisfaction or a cure will result from the performance or professional services;

2) contains a testimonial about or endorsement of a veterinarian or a combination of a veterinarian's name or photograph and identify as a veterinarian as part of a testimonial, endorsement, or sales promotion or a nonveterinarian product or service, to the extent that the testimonial or endorsement represents implicity or explicitly that the endorser's knowledge as a veterinarian give him or her expertise with respect to any feature or characteristic of the nonveterinary product or service, except that this prohibition does not apply to endorsements of valid, nonprofit, charitable organizations whose purpose is to promote veterinary medicine and animal health, provided that such organizations have been recommended for endorsement by a state veterinary association;

3) refers to secret methods of treatment or special services which characterize the ways of a charlatan;

4) concerns illegal transactions;

5) is not identified as a paid advertisement or solicitation unless it is apparent from the context that it is a paid advertisement or solicitation;

6) contains statistical data or other information based on past performance or case reports;

7) contains a statement of opinion as to the quality of professional services or a representation regarding the quality of professional services which is not susceptible of verification to the public;

8) states or implies that a veterinarian is a certified or recognized specialist unless the veterinarian is board certified in such specialty;

9) is intended or is likely to create an inflated or unjustified expectation;

10) contains a material misrepresentation of fact;

11) omits to state any material fact necessary to make the statement not misleading in light of the circumstances under which it is made;

12) would result in the violation of any law or regulation or a contractual or other obligation of any person through whom the veterinarian seeks to communicate;

13) contains a representation or implication that is likely to cause an ordinary prudent layperson to misunderstand or be deceived or fails to contain reasonable warnings or disclaimers necessary to make a representation or implication not deceptive; or

14) relates to professional fees other than: (a) a statement of the fixed fee charged for a specific professional service, provided that the description of such service would not be misunderstood or be deceptive and that the statement indicates whether additional fees may be incurred for related professional services which may be required in individual cases; (b)a statement of the range of fees for specifically described professional services, provided that there is reasonable disclosure of all relevant variables and considerations affecting the fees so that the statement would not be misunderstood or be deceptive, including, without limitation, an indication whether additional fees may be incurred for related professional services which may be required in individual cases.

In advertising by veterinarians, the unqualified use of terms such as "$20 and up" or "$20 to $30" is in violation of AVMA's Advertising Regulations which state that a statement of the range of fees for specifically described professional services must include reasonable disclosure of all relevant variables and causes affecting the fees so that the statement will not be misunderstood or be deceptive. Such statements about fees must also indicate whether additional fees may be incurred for related professional services which may be required in individual cases. Advertising of discounts and discounted fees is considered unprofessional.

Section 3:
Guidelines for Professional Conduct

Principles Applicable to All

The Principles are intended to aid veterinarians individually and collectively in maintaining a high level of ethical conduct.

The ethical principles governing a group, clinic, partnership, or association shall be exactly the same as shall apply to the individuals. They are not laws, but standards by which an individual may determine the propriety of conduct in relationship with clients, colleagues, and with the public.

1) Conduct characterizing a high standard of correct behavior is expected of all members of the profession.

2) Veterinarians should first of all be good citizens and leaders in movements to advance community welfare. They should commit no act that will reflect unfavorably upon the worthiness of their profession.

3) That all component associations that have not done so, adopt the AVMA Principles or a similar code of ethics, and all associations appoint on active committee on ethics

4) That all state associations endeavor to include in the programs of their state meetings, a paper or discussion on professional ethics.

5) That since a good many violations of the Principles have been observed during the first year of practice, it is suggested that the teaching of ethics and professional morals be intensified in the schools.

6) That the Principles be given a thorough study with a view to clarification of certain sections and amendments to strengthen it.

7) That a more determined effort be made to enforce the Principles in their entirety.

Consultations

Consultations should be conducted in such a spirit of professional cooperation between consultant and attendant veterinarian as to assure the client's confidence in veterinary medicine.

When in the course of authorized official duty it is necessary for a veterinarian to render service in the field of another veterinarian, it will be considered unethical to offer free or compensated service or advice other than that which comes strictly within the scope of the official duty.

Therapy, Determination of Determination of therapy must not be relegated to secondary consideration with remuneration to the veterinarian being the primary interest. The veterinarian's obligation to uphold the dignity and honor of the profession precludes entering into an arrangement whereby, through commission or rebates, judgment on choice of treatment would be influenced by considerations other than needs of the patient, welfare of the client, or safety to the public.

Drug, Chemical, and Alcohol Abuse

Veterinarians impaired by alcohol or other drugs should seek assistance from qualified organizations or individuals. Colleagues of impaired veterinarians should make every effort to encourage such individuals to obtain assistance and overcome such disability.

Displays In Waiting Rooms

It is permissible to display professional veterinary products in the waiting room. The display of nonprofessional products is undesirable, but is permissible if such nonprofessional products are generally unavailable or are difficult to obtain in the general vicinity of the client being served.

Commercial Use of Reprints

In the handling of reprints of scientific articles by industrial firms, the firm should obtain the publisher's and author's consent prior to distribution of reprints, and that the publisher in granting permission for a firm to make or distribute reprints should stipulate that the reprint is to remain unchanged, entirely separate, and without any overprint or promotional attachments.

Boarding Kennels

A commercial boarding kennel may be owned by a veterinarian but should not be operated under the veterinarian's name, and the telephone number should be separate from that used by the veterinarian in the conduct of the practice. Persons answering the boarding kennel telephone should not answer by giving the name of the veterinarian or the hospital.

Drugs, Practitioner's Responsibility In The Choice of

Practitioners of veterinary medicine, in common with practitioners in other branches of medicine, are fully responsible for their actions with respect to a patient from the time they accept the case until it is released from their care. In the choice of drugs, biologics, or other treatments, they are expected to use their professional judgment in the interests of the patient, based upon their knowledge of the condition, the probably effects of the treatment, and the available scientific evidence which may affect these decisions. If the preponderance of professional judgment is, or seems to be, contrary to theirs, the burden upon the practitioners to sustain their judgment becomes heavier. Nevertheless, the judgment is theirs and theirs alone.

Policy Pertaining to Corporate Ownership and Management of Veterinary Practices

Veterinarians' participation with other persons in corporations and associations can be divided into three categories. First, professional organizations may be formed in order that their members may practice veterinary medicine. The AVMA believes that the public interest will be served best when decisions affecting the care and treatment of animal patients are made by veterinarians. Having obtained extensive professional education and training, only veterinarians are competent to diagnose disorders and to analyze each patient's complete health requirements. Therefore, the AVMA recommends that the exercise of professional veterinary judgment and skill be governed by veterinarians rather than by nonveterinarians. Superior veterinary medical care is most likely to result when veterinarians in professional corporations, associations, or partnerships retain full control over all professional veterinary judgments.

Second, veterinarians may join organizations created merely to own equipment or the physical assets of a veterinary hospital or to perform business functions. For example, veterinarians may lease a hospital or obtain accounting services from a nonveterinary organization. Since this kind of joint enterprise does not determine the professional treatment which animal patients receive, the public interest will not be jeopardized.

Third, veterinarians, on behalf of nonveterinary corporations, may, wherever permitted by individual state laws, render veterinary services to the public or to such corporations. Because the principal officers, directors, and executives of such organizations may not be veterinarians, veterinarians who practice for such organizations must be especially vigilant in ensuring that their professional veterinary judgments and responsibilities are neither influenced nor controlled by such nonveterinary individuals to the detriment of the animal patient. Regardless of the setting in which veterinary medicine is practiced, veterinarians must always maintain the quality of veterinary care at the usual high professional level.

Since the preceding three types of joint veterinary organizations are sometimes combined, the AVMA recommends that veterinarians be particularly careful to distinguish between enterprises which merely supply ancillary services and organizations which attempt to influence veterinarians' professional responsibilities. So that all animal patients will secure the best medical care, veterinarians should retain full control over the exercise of professional veterinary judgment and skill in corporations whose members or personnel practice veterinary medicine. Only in this way will the present high professional standards be maintained and will the welfare of the animal patients remain the principal concern of veterinarians.

Redemption Coupons

Participation by veterinarians in coupon redemption schemes may be regarded as endorsement of or testimonial for a commercial product and is unprofessional.

Certificates or Diplomas, Continuing Education, Display of

Since the display of continuing education course certificates or diplomas might lead the public to infer that the veterinarian to whom they are issued is a specialist in the specific subject matter, the public display of such documents is unprofessional.

Emergency Service

Every practitioner has a moral and ethical responsibility to provide service when because of accidents or other emergencies involving animals it is necessary to save life or relieve suffering. Inasmuch as the veterinarian cannot always be available to provide this service, the veterinarian has anobligation to join with colleagues in the area to see that emergency services are provided consistent with the needs of the locality.

Pet Cemeteries and Pet Crematoriums, Veterinary Ownership-Operation of

The ethical aspects of ownership-operation of pet cemeteries or crematoriums by veterinarians should not be significantly different from the veterinarian's involvement in other nonveterinary business activities such as pet shops, boarding kennels, and feed mills. Ideally, the enterprise should be a business entity completely separated from the veterinary practice, with the telephone number, the telephone directory listing, the name of the enterprise, and the mailing address indicating no connection with a veterinary hospital, and with separate business records.

The veterinarian who does not own or operate a cemetary or crematorium as a separate business but does provide such service on request should in no way announce or advertise the service.

The veterinarian who renders a disposal, burial, or cremation service should take special care to avoid the impression that veterinarians are caretakers of the quick and the dead. There is potential for unfavorable public relations and questions of ethics when the healer is in a position to profit from the disposition of deceased patients.

Inasmuch as the pet-owning public views burial and cremation in terms of human reference, these services, when rendered for pet animals, should be fully explained so that the differences, if any, will be understood and the client will not be deceived. For example, if the burial of a client's pet does not include a roughbox or casket, a stone marker, title to the plot of land, and perpetual care, the absence of those details should be clearly stated, preferably in writing.

Professional Relationships with New Clients

Great potential for the development of poor client-veterinarian relationships occurs when a dissatisfied animal owner takes the initiative of going from one veterinarian to another without referral. The second veterinarian's careless or ill-considered comments could even result in a lawsuit against a colleague.

The following suggestions are offered for consideration by veterinarians in dealing with clients with whom they are not acquainted or for whom they have not previously rendered service:

Conduct yourself in word and action as if the patient had been referred to you by a colleague. Try to ascertain by careful questioning whether the client has consulted another veterinarian and if so the veterinarian's name, diagnosis and treatment. It may be advisable to contact the previous veterinarian in order to ascertain the diagnosis and treatment before telling the client how you plan to handle the case.

Describe your diagnosis and intended treatment carefully so that the client will be generally satisfied with the professional contacts.

Consider the advisability of notifying the previous veterinarian(s) of your diagnosis and therapy.

Handle new clients, their sick animals, and the veterinarians they have consulted previously in a manner consistent with the Golden Rule. To critize or disparage another veterinarian's service to a client is unethical. If your colleague's actions reflect professional incompetence or neglect or abuse of the patient, call it to your colleague's attention and, if appropriate, to the attention of officers or practice committees of the local or state veterinary associations or the proper regulatory agency.

You may refuse to accept a client or patient but do not do so solely on the basis that the client had previously contacted another veterinarian.

If for any reason a client requests referral to another veterinarian or veterinary institution, the attending veterinarian should be willing to honor the request and to facilitate the necessary arrangements.

It should also be recognized that the first veterinarian to handle the case has an obligation to other veterinarians that the client may choose to consult about the same case. The first veterinarian should readily withdraw from the case, indicating the circumstances on the records, and should be willing to forward copies of the medical records to other veterinarians who request them.

Vaccination Clinics

Definition: The term vaccination clinics applies to either privately or publicly supported activities in which veterinarians are engaged in mass immunization of pet animals. Usually, animals are brought in to points of assembly by their owners or caretakers in response to a notification that immunization services will be available. Characteristically, these clinics do not provide the opportunity for the participating veterinarians to (1) conduct a physical examination of the individual animals to be immunized, (2) obtain a history of past immunization or prior diseases, or (3) advise individual owners on follow-up immunization and health care.

Scientific and Technical Considerations - Rabies vaccination for the purpose of protecting the public health may be achieved in a rabies vaccination clinic.

When the primary objective is to protect the animal patient's health, clinical examination of the patient including proper history taking, is an essential and necessary part of a professionally acceptable immunization procedure.

Such a clinical examination is expected to be provided without regard to where the vaccination procedure is performed.

Humane Organizations and Spay and Neuter Clinics: Examination and Surgical Sterilization of Pets

A veterinarian should at all times exercise individual judgment in deciding whether to undertake the care of any particular patient regardless of whether the patient is referred by a humane organization, a spay and neuter clinic, or others. The fees, if any, charged by a veterinarian as a result of any such referral are likewise a matter for individual judgment.

Diagnostic Clinics, Guidelines for Conducting

The problems that have arisen when specialists go into communities to conduct diagnostic clinics under sponsorship of breed associations, sometimes with animosity developing between the specialists and local veterinary practitioners, could be largely avoided if the following guidelines were applied. In proposing these guidelines, the Judicial Council recognized that the clinic approach has shortcomings.

1) Animals should be examined in the favorable environment of a properly equipped veterinary facility where adequate equipment is available and ample time can be taken for anamnesis and subsequent discussion between the specialist and the owner.

2) A diagnostic clinic should be jointly sponsored by a breed association and a local veterinary association.

3) Pertinent information should be recorded for every animal examined at the clinic.

4) Results of the examination should be sent in duplicate to the animal owner by the sponsoring organization, so that the owner may give a copy at the owner's discretion to the veterinarian.

Veterinarian-Client Relationships

The ethical ideals of the veterinary profession imply that a doctor of veterinary medicine and the veterinarian's staff will protect the personal privacy of clients, unless the veterinarian is required, by law, to reveal the confidences or unless it becomes necessary in order to protect the health and welfare of the individual, the animals, and/or others whose health and welfare may be endangered.

Press Relations

Members are encouraged to write articles for the local press announcing the presence of contagious or other important diseases and their seasonal prevention or treatment, provided the motive is a bona fide attempt to protect the health and welfare of animals and the public, rather than personal gain.

RULES OF DISCIPLINARY PROCEDURES OF THE AVMA

This 1975 version of the "Rules of Disciplinary Procedures" was prepared by the Judicial Council in order to make the document consistent with the AVMA's Bylaws and to clarify certain passages. The Executive Board concurred in the revisions proposed and referred the revised document to the House of Delegates which on July 12, 1975 at the Annual Meeting of the AVMA in Anaheim, CA approved the amendments incorporated into this 1975 version.

The procedures established in these Rules shall govern proceedings concerning membership in the Association conducted by the Judicial Council pursuant to Bylaws Article I, Section 8. The procedures set forth in these Rules are subordinate to the Constitution and Bylaws of the AVMA. In the event of any conflict between these Rules and the provisions of the Constitution and Bylaws, the latter shall prevail.

Section 1 - Definitions - As used herein, "Association" means the American Veterinary Medical Association, "Members" means the members of the Association, "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Judicial Council, "Party" means the complainant or respondent in a disciplinary proceeding referred to herein, "Executive Vice President" means the Executive Vice President of the Association, "Bylaws" means the Bylaws of the American Veterinary Medical Association, and "Judicial Council" means the duly elected Judicial Council of the Association.

Section 2 - Initiation of Proceedings - (a) Any person, whether a member or not, or any constituent association, may file a complaint against any member. Such complaint must be filed in writing with the Secretary, dated and signed by the complainant, stating the facts on which it is based; provided, however, that a complaint shall not be considered by the Judicial Council unless filed within one year after the facts constituting the matter complained of became known to the complainant or could have been known in the exercise of reasonable diligence.

b) Upon his own motion, the Executive Vice President may, and upon instruction of the Board of Governors or the Executive Board of AVMA must, investigate the actions of any member when there is a reason to believe that the member is guilty of conduct subject to disciplinary action. If such investigation reveals evidence to support disciplinary action, the Executive Vice President shall prepare a complaint and refer it to the Secretary to be set down for hearing. The Executive Vice President or his designate shall present the case at the subsequent hearing on behalf of the Association as complainant.

c) A complaint may be filed by an investigating jury pursuant to Article V, Section 2(b) (iv) of the Bylaws.

d) To be considered by the Judicial Council, a complaint must allege in writing facts which constitute a basis for disciplinary action for any of the reasons set forth in Article I, Section 8, of the Bylaws.

e) The Secretary shall promptly review every complaint to determine whether (1) to refer the complaint to a constituent organization for further proceedings, (2) to recommend to the Judicial Council that the complaint be dismissed as not involving an issue within the jurisdiction of the Association, or (3) to set the complaint for hearing by the Judicial Council. The Secretary may send a copy of the complaint to the party complained against and request that party to furnish the Secretary with a response before making a preliminary determination.

Section 3 - Hearings - (a) After a complaint has been set down for hearing by the Judicial Council, the Secretary shall serve a copy of the complaint on each party complained against (hereinafter called the respondent) with notice that the party may file a written reply with the Secretary, in duplicate, within thirty days, and that if that party does not file a reply, the charges may be taken as true by default. The Judicial Council may accept late filing of a reply in its discretion.

The Secretary shall promptly deliver copies of the reply, if any, to the complainant and the Judicial Council, or promptly notify each that no reply has been filed within the time prescribed.

b) The chairman of the Judicial Council shall designate the time and place of hearing and the Secretary shall notify the complainant and the respondent of the time and place designated. An appearance at a hearing without objection by a party will constitute a waiver of any defect in the notice of that hearing. In the event that the respondent fails to appear at a duly noticed hearing without obtaining a continuance or adjournment thereof, the Judicial Council may proceed with the hearing in the respondent's absence and shall reach its decision based on the evidence made available at the hearing.

c) After a complaint has been filed with the Secretary, it may be withdrawn by the complainant only with the consent of the Judicial Council.

d) At any hearing every party has the right to present any witnesses, to submit any evidence pertinent to the case, and to cross-examine witnesses of others. Witnesses giving oral testimony shall be sworn in by the chairman. Before permitting testimony relating to the character or general reputation of anyone, the Judical Council shall satisfy itself that the testimony has a direct bearing on the case at issue.

Section 4 - Decisions of Judicial Council - (a) The decision of the Judicial Council shall be by a majority vote by secret ballot, and in writing containing findings of fact and statement of disciplinary action, if any. The decision concerning each member complained against shall be (1) to acquit, (2) to censure, (3) to place on probation, (4) to suspend, or (5) to expel. A failure of secrecy shall not invalidate the decision. The decision shall be filed with the Secretary who shall transmit a copy of the decision to complainant and respondent within fourteen days after it is rendered.

b) Within thirty days after the decision has been rendered, either party may petition the Judicial Council for a rehearing, solely on the ground of newly discovered material evidence which the petitioner could not, with reasonable diligence, have discovered and produced at the original hearing. The petition must be filed in writing with the Secretary.

The petitioner must deliver copies of the Petition for Rehearing to each party with notice that a written reply may be filed with the Secretary within fifteen days. A copy of the notice must be sent promptly to the Secretary.

c) A petition for rehearing shall be considered by the Judicial Council at its next regular meeting and shall be granted or denied and upon such action the Secretary shall immediately inform the respondent and complainant. No more than one petition for rehearing may be filed by any party in a case.

Section 5 - Preliminary Judicial Determination - If the Judicial Council believes that the disciplined member may resort to legal action because of suspension or expulsion, it may specify that the suspension or expulsion shall become effective upon entry of the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction in a suit by the Association for declaratory relief declaring that the suspension or expulsion violates no right of the member.

Section 6 - General Provisions - (a) Any party to a disciplinary proceeding may file with the Secretary a written request for disqualification of a member of the Judicial Council, stating the grounds cited for disqualification. Any ground for disqualification of which the party then has knowledge is deemed waived unless the request is filed before the Judicial Council renders its decision. If a majority of the members of the Judicial Council finds any automatic ground for disqualification to be present, or finds any other facts which in their judgment may prevent a member of the Judicial Council from rendering an impartial decision, or create the appearance that the member will not do so, that member shall stand disqualified.

b) Every party may be represented in person or by a member of the Association. The Judicial Council may have legal counsel present to advise it on issues of procedure.

c) The Judicial Council will not be bound by technical rules of evidence employed in legal proceedings. The Judicial Council may accept any evidence it deems appropriate.

In any proceeding a transcript may be made at the discretion of the Judicial Council.

d) Any notice required to be given or paper required to be served may be given or served by personally handing it to the party to be notified or by mail addressed to his last known mailing address; if mailed, notice shall be deemed given when mailed.

Notice of any hearing shall include the names of the members of the Judicial Council and, except for an adjourned hearing, be given not less than ten days before the date of the hearing, and no hearing shall be set for a time not permitting at least ten days' notice.

e) Communications shall be directed to the Secretary. The Secretary shall render all necessary assistance to the parties, shall on application furnish forms and papers required, shall receive and file all documents or other papers, and shall receive all fees and disburse all moneys payable to the Association.

GENERAL APPELLATE PROCEDURES OF THE AMERICAN VETERINARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

E. At the discretion of the Board of Governors or upon the advance written request of the petitioner or the AVMA decision-maker, a transcript of the hearing shall be made at the expense of the person requesting the transcript.

Section 8 - Communications with Board of Governors: After a written notification of appeal is received at AVMA and before the Board of Governors has ruled upon the petition for review, no person shall communicate, orally or in writing, with any member of the Board, in support of or in opposition to the petition, unless the substance of the communication, including complete copies of any documents submitted therewith, is also revealed to the petitioner and to the AVMA decision-maker. The petitioner and the AVMA decision-maker shall have an opportunity to respond in writing within 30 days after they are notified of the communications. The Board of Governors shall not rule upon the petition for review until the aforementioned 30-day period, if applicable, has expired.

Section 9 - Board of Governors Decision: After review and consideration of the AVMA decision, the petition for review, and any other relevant evidence, the Board of Governors shall issue a written decision affirming or recommending changes in the AVMA decision and Section 10 - Expenses: In the event that a hearing is held before the Board, reasonable expenses, based on AVMA guidelines for travel, meals and lodging of the Board and witnesses, shall be borne by the petitioner if the Board affirms in its entirety the AVMA decision and if the petitioner had requested the hearing. Such expenses will be borne by the AVMA or by the AVMA decision-maker if the Board sustains in its entirety the petitioner's appeal and if the AVMA decision-maker has requested the hearing. In all other instances the Board of Governors shall provide for the equitable distribution of the hearing expenses, if any.

A. Expenses will be initially reimbursed by AVMA and billed back to the appropriate party, depending on the Board's decision on the petition for review.

Section 11 - Reconsideration: After the announcement of the Board's decision on the petition for review, the petitioner or the AVMA decision-maker may file with the Board of Governors a petition for reconsideration on the basis of new evidence that could not, with reasonable diligence, have been discovered and made available to the Board before its decision on the petition for review. The procedure for reconsideration shall be the same as that described in Section 6 through 9 above. No more than one petition for reconsideration may be filed by the petitioner or by the AVMA decision-maker. Copies of the petition for reconsideration shall be provided by the Board to the petitioner or to the AVMA decision-maker which did not file the petition for reconsideration.

C. A majority of the members of the Executive Board may vote to affirm or modify the decision of the Board of Governors, or to take no position at all with respect to the decision of the Board of Governors. Section 13 - General Provisions: The following general provisions shall apply to petitions for review filed before the Board of Governors:

A. The petitioner or the AVMA decision-maker may file with the Board of Governors a written request for disqualification of a member of the Board stating the grounds for disqualification. Any ground for disqualification of which the petitioner or the AVMA decision-maker then has knowledge is deemed waived unless the request is filed before the Board of Governors renders its decision on the petition for review. If a majority of the Board of Governors finds that any of its members should be disqualified because of any facts which in their judgment prevent such member from rendering an impartial decision or create the appearance that the member will not do so, such member shall be disqualified. The remaining members of the Board shall appoint a replacement for the disqualified member from the AVMA Executive Board.

B. The Board of Governors will not be bound by technical rules of evidence employed in legal proceedings. The Board may accept any evidence deemed appropriate.

C. Any paper required to be filed, served or given to another person may be filed, served or given by personally handing it to the person to be notified or by mailing it addressed to the person's last known mailing address; if mailed, the paper shall be deemed filed, served, or given when mailed.

CHECKLIST FOR EMPLOYMENT AND PARTNERSHIP CONTRACTS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1982)

Because veterinary practice often requires that veterinarians work with or for other veterinarians, some contractual agreements are essential. The following points of consideration should be considered in preparing such contracts in order to lessen the probability of disagreement and clearly define individual responsibility. Because there are many varied factors depending on the type of practice, capabilities of people involved, section of the country, etcetera; no model contract is suggested. Instead, the points of consideration listed below should be agreed upon when a specific contract is prepared. It must be understood that there should be mutual confidence in each party's willingness to do the right thing. All possible contingencies can not be anticipated in a contract and, as concerns arise, an attitude of fairness between the concerned parties will usually solve problems satisfactorily. Most disagreements are founded on misunderstandings and the following areas of understanding will lessen the likelihood of future altercations. It is recommended that legal counsel be engaged to review all documents before entering into contracts or agreements of such importance.

GUIDELINES ON EMERGENCY VETERINARY SERVICE

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1988)

1. Emergency veterinary service should be provided in every community where private veterinary service is regularly provided.
2. The public should be informed about the veterinary emergency service through telephone directories and other means. For a classification of emergency facilities, see the AVMA Guidelines for Naming of Veterinary Facilities.
3. The veterinarian who provides emergency treatment should refer the case and all pertinent records back to the owner's regular veterinarian, or a veterinarian of the owner's choice, as soon as practical after the emergency treatment has been concluded.
4. An emergency clinic, as all veterinary medical facilities, should maintain adequate records, provide proper examination facilities, radiologic and anesthetic equipment, have an adequate staff of ancillary employees, have an up-to-date library of appropriate textbooks and periodicals, and a pharmacy containing both emergency drugs and those for continuing therapy. Housekeeping and maintenance procedures should be incorporated to provide a clean and pleasant environment for patients, staffs, and clientele. No set of emergency service guidelines can be designed to cover all practice situations. However, all veterinary emergency plans, regardless of the size or location, should be dedicated to a high standard of veterinary care and should be consistent with the "Principles of Veterinary Medical Ethics."

GUIDELINES FOR HORSESHOW VETERINARIANS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1982)

The American Veterinary Medical Association endorses the American Association of Equine Practitioners' policy on Veterinary Service for Horseshows as stated in Section A, page 32 in Guide for Veterinary Service and Judging of Equestrian Events , published by AAEP in June, 1984. The AVMA further endorses Section B of that publication, which defines areas of veterinary responsibility and provides guidelines for the conduct of horseshow veterinarians.

The American Veterinary Medical Association: 1) encourages its members who serve as show horse veterinarians to become familiar with AHSA rules that govern conduct of horse show participants and with applicable state or federal laws relating to horseshows, 2) encourages the scheduling of pertinent educational subjects at veterinary meetings and conventions, 3) encourages the publication and dissemination of educational material to veterinarians who are interested in show horse medicine, 4) encourages its members who are interested in show horse veterinary practice to become members of the American Horse Shows Association.

With the consent of the American Association of Equine Practitioners, the AAEP documents refered to above are quoted below for the benefit of all members. The AHSA Rule Book is available only to AHSA members. Membership information can be obtained from the American Horse Shows Association, Inc., 220 East 42nd Street, Fourth Floor, New York, NY 10017-9998, (212) 972-AHSA.

A. A.A.E.P. Policy on Official Show Veterinary Service

The role and responsibility of Official Veterinarians for horse shows and other equestrian events, long established as official policy by the American Association of Equine Practitioners is a crucial basic guide. Following is their policy statement:

> The Official Veterinarian shall serve as a professional consultant on veterinary matters to the show management, the stewards and the judges.
> He shall in his professional role advise the management and cooperating persons and agencies concerning the care and welfare of the animals present at the show or event and shall administer to the horses present as the need arises.
> He shall endeavor to do everything possible within the scope of his professional training to aid the sport in general and the event in particular. B. Areas of Veterinary Responsibility

There are always two and maybe as many as five areas of veterinary service and responsibility at a horse show. (1) The Official Horse Show Veterinarian responsible to Show Management, (2) the Attending Veterinarian responsible for providing professional services for exhibitors, (3) U.S. Department of Agriculture (APHIS) requirements generated by the Horse Protection Act of 1970, (4) Drug and medication, and the American Quarter Horse Association, (5) and State regulatory requirements in States where a certificate of vaccination for Venezuelan Encephalomyelitis or a certificate of a negative test for equine infectious anemia is prerequisite to showing a horse.

1. The Official Show Veterinarian in effect is an employee of and is responsible to Show Management. His principal function is to serve as professional consultant and advisor on all veterinary matters affecting the show. This includes coordinating the foregoing five areas of veterinary responsibility and in some instances performing all duties necessary to implement them. With respect to the American Horse Shows Association, his duties are clearly stated in the AHSA rule book (quoted below). Other governing rule books are less specific.
2. The Attending Veterinarian has the role of treating sick and injured horses on the show grounds and in doing so is in effect employed by and responsible to the individual horse owner involved. A local practitioner with hospital and other services readily available for emergencies is best fitted for this role.
3. Dual roles whereby the same individual serves both as Official Veterinarian and Attending Veterinarian is required by some shows. This is most undesirable because it immediately creates a serious conflict of interest sitaution and for that reason is discouraged in the states A.A.E.P. policy. Recommended procedure is to select a non-local man to serve as Official Veterinarian - a man not closely familiar with horses being shown and who has no clients among the exhibitors. Attending Veterinary Service is best provided by local practitioners.
4. U.S.D.A. Veterinary Service is required by the Horse Protection Act which became Public Law 91-540 on December 9, 1970. It establishes special veterinary service at shows where it is applicable. The Law was signed primarily to prevent the showing of Tennessee Walking Horses that had been "sored". Enforcement is the responsibility of USDA and is handled by the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS). It is implemented through rules and regulations published by USDA. The law, as well as the rules and regulations, are not published by USDA. The law, as well as the rules and regulations, are not published here because they are subject to change. In fact, several changes have been made in the rules and more may be expected as experience in implementation is gained and dictates.

The law places several responsibilities on show management. One is that management must remove sored horses from the class in which they compete at some time prior to completion of judging and awarding of prizes. To accomplish this, management may require the official show veterinarian to examine all horses for evidence of soreing prior to entering the show ring. If such is to be the arrangement, USDA recommends that the veterinarian and management have written agreement that he is the veterinary medical officer designated to help management comply with the Horse Protection Act.

Usual procedure is for each horse to be inspected by the veterinarian at a designated convenient time and place before entering the show ring. If a horse is found that in the opinion of the examining veterinarian does not meet the qualifications of the show with respect to soreing, he must file an official written report with copies to (1) the show judges before the class is placed, (2) to management as soon as possible, and (3) to the veterinarian in charge of the APHIS Field Area within 72 hours of the close of the show.

If certain horses are to be inspected following a class, the person having custody of the horse should be so notified while the horse is still in the show ring. Such inspection should be conducted by a Federal or State employed veterinarian representing USDA if present at the show.

Any veterinarian involved in any with implementation of the Act at a show should read and fully understand all veterinary requirements and implications in the USDA rules and regulations. Information may be obtained from APHS area offices or from Veterinary Services, APHIS, USDA, Federal Center Bldg. No. 1, Hyattsville, MD 20782. He should also have in advance a clear-cut plan and understanding with show management as to criteria and procedures to follow in inspecting and reporting.

APHIS veterinarians may or may not be present at a show. Their presence in no way relieves show management of any responsibilities or the official show veterinarian of any duties.

One fact must be ever remembered - no veterinarian in any category has the authority to disqualify a horse and order that he not be shown. The veterinarian is not a police officer. He is a professional consultant and as such documents and renders his professional opinion directly to show management and the appropriate APHIS office. Any deviation from this procedure promptly leads to serious public relations problems.

5. Drugs and Medication Testing - The American Horse Shows Association has a drugs and medications testing program that involves many selected shows each year. The program is run by the AHSA Administrator of the Drugs and Medications Rule who makes all arrangements with the show to be tested. The American Quarter Horse Association has a comparable program for its shows. Some testing is being required by other organizations also.

6. State Animal Disease Regulatory Requirements - Some States, also show management of some shows, require that all horses have an official certification indicating they have been tested for equine infectious anemia and found negative prior to entering a show ground. Some States and some shows also have requirements for Venezuelan Equine Encephalomyelitis vaccination. Other diseases may cause comparable restrictions if at any time one becomes a threat. Such activities come under the direction of the State Veterinarian, responsible for animal disease control programs within the State. Requirements and administrative methods vary from State to State and show to show. Consequently, an Official Veterinarian must determine what pertains at each show.

7. Basic Veterinary Requirements- A great majority of all horse shows are governed either by the AHSA rule book or the AQHA rule book. Several other associations also have show rule books. All shows are governed by some rule book or recorded rules, portions of which dictate or affect veterinary service. Veterinary service requirements are not the same in all rule books. Also more than one rule book may govern at the same show. Consequently,any veterinarian before serving a show should ascertain from management what rules will pertain and have a clear-cut understanding as to what his duties and responsibilities are to be. The Official Veterinarian should have a complete understanding of all show rules and any State or Federal regulation pertinent to veterinary services for the show. He should also be familiar with all types of veterinary services that might be required at the show. The Attending Veterinarian should be prepared to handle cases from minor injuries to broken legs, respiratory infections, pneumonia and severe colic.

GUIDELINES FOR NAMING OF VETERINARY FACILITIES

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1988)

In order to avoid confusion on the part of the general public and to provide guidelines for consistency in the designation of veterinary facilities by the veterinary profession, the committee on designation of veterinary facilities recommends that the following nomenclature be used:

Animal Medical Center - A veterinary or animal medical center is defined as a facility in which consultative, clinical, and hospital services are rendered and in which a large staff of basic and applied veterinary scientists perform significant research and conduct advanced professional educational programs.

Hospital - A veterinary or animal hospital is defined as a facility in which the practice conducted includes the confinement as well as the treatment of patients.

Clinic - A veterinary or animal clinic is defined as a facility in which the practice conducted is essentially an out-patient type of practice.

Office - A veterinary facility where a limited or consultative practice is conducted and which provides no facilities for the housing of patients.

Mobile Facility - A practice conducted from a vehicle with special medical or surgical facilities or from a vehicle suitable only for making house or farm calls. Regardless of mode of transportation, such practice shall have a permanent base of operations with a published address and telephone facilities for making appointments or responding to emergency situations.

Emergency Facility - A veterinary medical service whose primary function is the receiving, treatment, and monitoring of emergency patients during its specified hours of operation. A doctor is in attendance at all hours of operation and sufficient staff is always available to provide timely and appropriate care. Doctors, support staff, instrumentation, medications, and supplies must be sufficient to provide an appropriate level of emergency care.

Note: A veterinary emergency service may be an independent, after-hour service; an independent 24-hour service; or part of a full-service hospital or large teaching institution.

On-call Emergency Service - A veterinary medical service whose doctors and staff are not on premises during all hours of operation, or whose doctors leave after a patient is treated.

GUIDELINES ON PET HEALTH INSURANCE AND OTHER 3RD PARTY ANIMAL HEALTH PLANS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1985)

The AVMA recognizes that there is potentially great value in pet health insurance and supports the concept of adequately funded, well organized, and licensed pet health insurance plans. However, it is not within the AVMA's purview to endorse any particular company's program. It is the duty and responsibility of the insurance commissioner in the state where a pet health insurance plan is sold to decide whether that pet health insurance, health maintenance organization, etc. meets the rules and regulations of that state.

The AVMA is primarily concerned with the ethical behavior, professional duties, and responsibilities of the veterinarian.

A Pet Health Insurance Program Should:

1. Be in the public interest, with clearly specified protection for the pet owner.
2. Allow pet owners the freedom to select a veterinarian of their choice.
3. Allow for referrals.
4. Be acceptable to the insurance commissioner of the state in which it is sold.
5. Be licensed to do business in the state in which the plan is sold.

A Pet Health Insurance Program Should Not:

1. Put veterinarians or their employees in the position of actively soliciting clients for commercial plans or receiving commissions from such plans.
2. Permit fee splitting.

Further, veterinarians may keep on hand or display in their facilities application forms and pamphlets pertaining to pet health insurance in order to respond to clients' requests for information.

PRESCRIPTION WRITING

(Adopted by the AVMA Executive Board, 1979)

Veterinarians often use or recommend the use of various veterinary drugs for the treatment of animals. Some of these drugs must be administered to the animal by the veterinarian for legal or medical reasons and other drugs can be administered by the veterinarian or by the animal owner. With respect to the latter kinds of drugs, the animal owner may wish to purchase them directly from the veterinarian prescribing the drug or from another source.

Questions have been raised about the ability of the animal owner to purchase a veterinary drug from a non-veterinary source if the drug can be legally and medically administered by the owner. To purchase such drugs from a nonveterinary source, the owner often requires and receives a written prescription from the veterinarian. In order to permit the animal owner to continue to choose a veterinary or non-veterinary source for a veterinary drug which he or she can administer, veterinarians should offer prescriptions to animal owners who want to obtain such drugs from nonveterinary sources.

GUIDELINES FOR REFERRALS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1980)

Definitions

Referring Veterinarian: The veterinarian who was, at the time of referral, in charge of the patient.

Receiving Veterinarian: A veterinarian to whom a patient is sent either by referral or for consultation.

Consultation: A deliberation between 2 or more veterinarians concerning the diagnosis of a disease and the proper management of the case.

Referral: The transfer of responsibility of diagnosis and treatment from the referring veterinarian to the receiving veterinarian.

Method of Referral

Communication should be by letter, telephone, or direct contact between veterinarians. The most appropriate method of communication should be determined by the veterinarians involved.

The referring veterinarian should provide the receiving veterinarian with all the appropriate information pertinent to the case before or at the time of the receiving veterinarian's first contact with the patient or the client.

When the referred patient has been examined and definite findings have been made, the referring veterinarian should be promptly informed of those findings. Information provided should include diagnosis, proposed treatment, and other recommendations.

Immediately upon discharge of the patient, the referring veterinarian should receive a detailed and complete report, preferably written, and be advised as to continuing care of the patient or termination of the case.

The receiving veterinarian should advise and encourage the client to contact the attending veterinarian for the continuing care of the patient.

Each veterinarian involved will collect his or her own fee from the client.

GUIDELINES FOR VETERINARY PRACTICE FACILITIES

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1978)

The AVMA considered establishing standards for veterinary practice facilities, and came to realize that specific requirements are difficult to define. The diverse types of practice, economic conditions, and facility requirements throughout the country preclude developing a single set of specific standards applicable to all practices.

As a result, the Association has listed 12 general principles of good practice that encompass all of the aspects of veterinary medicine and should be considered in the development and operation of any practice. They are:

1) Overall cleanliness and neatness of personnel.
2) Adequate protection against dissemination of disease.
3) Proper disposal of all waste material.
4) Adequate protection against radiation accidents.
5) Adequate ventilation and freedom from noxious odors.
6) Freedom from noise pollution.
7) Adequate restraint facilities as per specialty.
8) Availability of proper refrigeration and sterlization equipment.
9) Facilities and equipment suitable for currently acceptable veterinary practice.
10) Adequate therapeutic and financial records.
11) Evidence of continuing education participation.
12) Facilities should comply with local ordinances and with cognizance of OSHA recommendations.

POSITION ON ANIMAL DENTISTRY

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1982)

It is the opinion of the American Veterinary Medical Association that the cleaning, adjustment (floating), or repair of animals' teeth is a function of veterinary practice because it requires diagnosis and treatment, and to be fully effective demands extensive knowledge of anatomy, physiology, pathology, neurology, medicine, and surgery that is part of the graduate veterinarian's training.

POSITION ON ANIMAL HEALTH CERTIFICATES

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1981)

The accredited veterinarian is responsible for the accuracy of health certificates that he or she issues, and it behooves the individual veterinarian to conduct appropriate examinations before any health certificate is issued.

POSITION ON PRESIGNED HEALTH CERTIFICATES

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1974)

The AVMA believes that any veterinarian found guilty of presigning or otherwise misusing intra-or inter-state or export health certificates should have his or her accreditation immediately removed, and all pertinent information should be transmitted to the state board of veterinary medical examiners for a proper hearing leading to suspension of his or her license to practice veterinary medicine. The AVMA feels that the chief animal health official of each state should exercise strict control over the issuing and control of all health certificates.

POSITION ON ANIMAL POPULATION CONTROL AND OVARIOHYSTERECTOMY CLINICS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1981)

The overpopulation of unwanted dogs and cats, is of concern to public officials, animal control officers, humane leaders, the general public, and veterinarians.

Veterinarians have observed the growth of this serious and complex problem. They have repeatedly appealed to all who are concerned that effective and workable measures should be used to reduce the number of unwanted animals.

A number of veterinary medical associations and groups have extensively studied the problem and its possible solutions. The efforts and leadership of these groups are commendable.

The AVMA concludes:

(1) Animal population control is and should be of major concern.

(2) While some public officials have been remiss in providing for and effectively enforcing animal control laws, commendations are in order for the majority who have conscientiously tried to secure the personnel, funds, and equipment for this duty in keeping with increased public awareness of the problem.

(3) Ovariohysterectomy and orchiectomy (neutering) are highly recommended, but these procedures provide an extremely ineffective solution to control animal overpopulation.

  a) Neutering clinics have not had a major impact on animal population control. Even when provided at no cost, there has been little public use of their services. Such clinics do not reach a wide enough segment of the unwanted animal population to be effective. We praise responsible pet owners who use neutering to prevent unwanted animals.

  b) Experience has shown that many pet owners who use the services of free neutering clinics are in income groups which can afford the services of private veterinarians. If established, publicly financed clinics should insure that their services are primarily available to lower-income groups.

  c) Neutering clinics have frequently proved more costly than anticipated and have required public subsidization.

(4) The most promising solution to the control of unwanted animals lies in the ultimate development of an effective and inexpensive nonsurgical sterilization method for animals.

Based on these observations, AVMA cannot encourage the development of neutering clinics as an effective means of animal population control and particularly cannot advocate subsidization of neutering clinics with tax dollars.

The AVMA recommends the following positive and effective means for pet population control:

(1) Strict enforcement of existing animal control laws and development of more comprehensive and improved laws using concepts described in the Model Dog and Cat Control Ordinance.

(2) Substantially higher license fees for animals not neutered.

(3) Licensing of all cats and control measures for them comparable with those for dogs.

(4) Continuation by AVMA of an intensive public education information program designed to help pet owners to be more responsible and concerned.

(5) Requirements that animals adopted from any animal shelter - public or private - be rendered sterile.

(6) Encouragement of surgical sterilization until nonsurgical sterilization is available.

(7) Encourage development of an identification system for pet animals to aid in identifying unwanted or unowned animals.

(8) Cooperation of the veterinary profession, humane organizations, and concerned groups in effective efforts for pet population control.

POSITION ON COMPLAINTS ABOUT VETERINARY SERVICE

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1982)

The AVMA recommends:

1) that the colleges of veterinary medicine continue to place emphasis on the orientation of students to professionalism, ethics, practice management, and veterinarian-client relations for they are the key foundation of our profession's public image.
2) that each constituent association and each species-oriented specialty association that does not already have an ethics-grievance committee or a peer-review committee, consider establishing such a committee so that complaints about veterinary service coming to those organizations' attention will be handled promptly in an understanding manner.
3) that institutions that educate animal technicians continue to stress student orientation in client relationships.
4) that persons responsible for planning continuing education courses consider incorporating in their course schedules some material pertaining to professionalism, client relation, and the art of practice.
5) that complaint investigations should be handled through veterinary medical associations and their designated committees, wherever possible, before they come to the attention of the veterinary medical examining boards.

POSITION ON EMBRYO TRANSPLANT PROCEDURES

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1981)

A state veterinary medical association raised a question regarding the ethical relationship between the breeding specialist who performs embryo transplant procedures and the local practitioner who provides routine health care to the herd. Also questioned were the legal considerations related to a specialist performing surgical procedures related to embryo transplant in a state where the specialist is not licensed.

It was the opinion of the AVMA that embryo transfer procedure is a function of veterinary practice since it requires diagnosis and surgery. To be fully effective, it demands the extensive knowledge in anatomy, physiology, biochemistry, endocrinology, and sterile surgical procedures that is part of the training of the graduate veterinarian. The AVMA suggests that more practitioners become proficient in embryo transplantation and provide the service to their clients.

AVMA is not qualified to comment on the legal considerations relating to the various state practice acts, but all veterinarians should conform to the laws of the states in which they practice. The relationship between the 2 veterinarians seems to fall within the ethical considerations for referrals, and if the AVMA Guidelines for Referrals are followed, there should be no conflict.

POSITION ON USE OF SODIUM PENTOBARBITAL BY LAY PERSONS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1981)

It has been brought to the AVMA's attention that sodium pentobarbital is being used for euthanasia by humane organizations and dog pound personnel without veterinary supervision and with the possibility of drug abuse by unauthorized persons. Use of the drug is not illegal under proper supervision. The Drug Enforcement Agency regulations must be applied within the constraints of applicable state law.

Therefore, the AVMA recommends that sodium pentobarbital (Class II) should only be used by or under direct supervision of a licensed veterinarian registered with the DEA. In those areas where lay personnel or organizations are permitted to use sodium pentobarbital, the Drug Enforcement Agency should strictly enforce the Class II drug control regulations, requiring those persons or organizations to comply with the same registration, record keeping, security, and monitoring requirements as the licensed veterinarian.

PROTOCOL FOR THE TATOO IDENTIFICATION OF DOGS AND CATS THAT HAVE BEEN SPAYED OR NEUTERED[1]

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1980)

Since November, 1976, the AVMA Council on Veterinary Service has been pursuing a project to develop a means to identify spayed dogs and cats. This project was initiated by requests from the New York State Humane Association and the multi-state Colorado Federation of Animal Welfare Agencies. Those organizations felt that with the prominence of shelters in the role of animal placement, and with their often-mandatory requirements for spaying as a qualification for placement, a permanent means of spay identification was needed. Such identification should be easily recognized and serves as evidence of the surgery having been performed to prevent needless repeat surgery as new owners adhere to the adoption requirements. While feeling that the requests had merit, the Council recognized that, to be widely adopted by the profession, the identification procedure must be easily and economically performed and adaptable to the wide variety of surgical procedures used for ovariohysterectomies. This protocol has been developed in response to these various needs.

The Tatoo Symbol

A symbol denoting the indicated surgery is applied with a vibrating needle tattoo unit. For ovariohysterectomies, the female sex symbol (♀) with an x in the circle (⊗) is used. For castrations, the male symbol (●) is similarly recommended. For those who desire to use them, modifications of the symbols can be used if a hereditary defect is corrected surgically for the health and welfare of the animal. In such cases, spaying or neutering is recommended to prevent further spread of the defect. A portion of the symbol (●) can be applied at the time of initial surgery and completed when the spaying or neutering is done later. The size of the circle in the tatoos should be approximately 1/2'' to 3/4'' in diameter, depending on the size of the animal.

Instrumentation

A vibrating-type tattoo applicator is recommended to allow free-hand application at any selected site of appropriate size symbols for the type and size of patient. Of 3 such units that were available in veterinary marketing channels and tried by the author, 1 unit[2] was found to be superior.

Technique of Application

The recommended tattoo site is the prepubic area of the female or the inguinal area of the male. At the time of surgery, hair from this area is clipped in addition to hair at the surgical site. Before or after the major surgical procedure, the tattoo site is prepared by a presurgical scrub, using surgical soap, rinsed well with alcohol, and wiped dry. Next a thin coating of vaseline is applied to the tattoo site. The tattoo unit is securely held like a pencil and the skin is spread taut with the thumb and index finger of the other hand. With the machine properly adjusted, only light pressure is needed to make a lasting, indelible tattoo. The operator will become accustomed to the individual tattoo unit and will have to determine its individual ink requirements to complete a symbol. When the symbol is completed, the site is wiped and any needed "touchups" are made to the symbol. Another light coating of vaseline is then applied over the tattoo. Should it be more convenient to tattoo before surgery, a surgical scrub over the tattoo has no deleterious effect on its quality.

Conclusion

Adverse reactions or complications have not been encountered using the described procedure to tattoo over 2,000 patients during a 3-year period. Follow-up examinations have shown that the tattoo remains highly visible with little apparent fading or other deterioration. The time needed to perform the procedure is less than 1 minute of a surgical assistant's labor.

In addition to signifying that the surgery has been done, the tattoo also serves as another permanent identification mark on the animal. The benefit it affords for the welfare of the patient has received universal appreciation by the owners and plaudits from animal shelters and humane societies. All of this further enhances the image of veterinarians as caring professionals.

WILD OR EXOTIC ANIMALS AS PETS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1973)

RESOLVED, that AVMA strongly opposed the keeping of wild or exotic species of animals as pets and believes that all commercial traffic of these animals for such purpose should be prohibited.

Statement About the Resolution

People acquire skunks, raccoons, monkeys, alligators, and other exotic species as pets because they like to possess unusual pets or regard them as status symbols.

These exotic species create disease, diet, and exercise problems different from those of domesticated pets (dogs and cats).

Disposing of an exotic pet can be a traumatic experience, with difficulty in relocating such animals. Frequently, zoos will not accept them and they are "too domesticated" to return to the wild, so euthanasia may be the only alternative. Therefore, veterinarians should exert influence to discourage the keeping of wild or exotic species as pets.

STATEMENT ON CONTINUING EDUCATION IN BOVINE MASTITIS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1982)

The AVMA Mastitis Committee has recognized that graduating seniors from many U.S. veterinary colleges are poorly equipped to take the basic steps required to develop and maintain ongoing mastitis control programs. The microbiological screening procedures, the treatment regimens for loctating and dry-cow therapy, and the evaluation of milking equipment are areas in which the recent graduate must become proficient along with communication skills. The Committee also recognizes that these areas of expertise are not going to be developed in the university classroom, but rather in the field. We therefore strongly encourage the broader development of seminar-type continuing education sponsored by national, state and/or local veterinary associations. We recommend three major areas of involvement: 1) microbiology of milk and milk quality, 2) pharmacokinetics of mastitis therapy, and 3) milking machine function.

GUIDELINES FOR VETERINARIANS PARTICIPATING IN OVARIOHYSTERECTOMY-ORCHIECTOMY CLINICS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, July, 1984)

Veterinarians who participate in ovariohysterectomy-orchiectomy clinics should abide by the spirit and the letter of the veterinary code of ethics.

Any animal, regardless of its ownership, deserves the best efforts of the licensed veterinarian, and a quality of care equal to that provided by the private sector of the veterinary profession.

Therefore, the quality of veterinary medicine practiced and the quality of the surgery performed should equal the quality of private practice generally available.

POSITION ON SURGICAL PROCEDURES FOR NONVETERINARY STUDENTS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, July 1984)

It is the opinion of the American Veterinary Medical Association that surgery on any animal is a function of veterinary practice which requires extensive knowledge of anatomy, physiology, pathology, and medicine. Therefore, instruction of nonveterinary students in surgical procedures is not advocated.

RECOMMENDED MINIMAL STANDARDS OF PERFORMANCE FOR PRACTICING VETERINARIANS WHO OFFER MILK QUALITY CONTROL PROGRAMS

(Approved by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1984)

Losses due to mastitis are estimated at over $180/cow in the USA. Recent work emphasizes losses due to even small cell count increases. Dairymen who have followed sound milk quality control programs have found the cost of control to be far less than the heavy losses associated with mastitis, and they have found that milk production can be significantly increased as infections are eliminated. Results of successful programs have been widely publicized through the efforts of extension personnel and others, thus stimulating other dairymen to seek guidance in establishing control programs. Many dairymen seek such guidance from veterinarians in private practice. Some dairymen, however, do not have ready access to the services of private practitioners who are skilled in developing milk quality control programs.

Milk quality control programs generally have three goals:

1) Prevention of an infectious disease which has a direct and serious economic impact for the dairyman.
2) Alleviation of mastitis which is present or may occur.
3) Improvement of milk quality through a reduced incidence of the disease and through good management practices.

Various formal and informal programs have been in effect for many years. During the past 20 years milk quality programs have been instituted by the United States Public Health Service and by virtually every local health department in the nation. Some states and some local areas offer specific mastitis control programs. More often, such programs for mastitis control have been a matter between dairymen and their veterinarians.

Although milk quality and mastitis control programs may be separate concepts, there is a strong interaction and many milk quality programs are solved only by attention to the mastitis problem. In varying degrees these milk quality and mastitis control programs have included:

1) Somatic Cell Counts (SCC) or other screening tests to detect abnormalities in the milk supply.
2) Use of DHI and other records that indicate SCC, bacteria, etc.
3) Consideration of the environment, sanitation, and milking management on the dairy farm.
4) Consideration of the milking system and equipment.
5) Identification of the individual affected and infected animals.
6) Identification of the causative organism.
7) Therapy and residue avoidance.
8) Prevention.

In many instances, private practitioners will direct and assist in milk quality programs. In some cases, they will be in the position to evaluate and interpret the opinions of others. Sometimes, a team effort would be involved in offering a complete milk quality control program. The team might include: private practitioner, milking machine serviceman, sanitarian, dairy plant fieldman, dairy extension specialist, and agricultural engineer. Because it is usually not feasible to involve all of these specialists in the solution to individual dairy farm problems, private practitioners are in the best position to evaluate and interpret all of the relevant facts and opinions and to coordinate them into a rational milk quality control program.

The committee believes the outline that follows could be useful to various groups within the profession. Private practitioners may find it a useful list against which they can score their methods of practice, and it may be useful to them as a basis of requesting workshops or refresher courses. The list may be useful to those in the profession (veterinary medical associations, extension veterinarians, colleges of veterinary medicine, and continuing education coordinators) who have a responsibility for developing continuing education courses for private practitioners. Colleges of veterinary medicine may find the material useful in evaluating certain courses offered to veterinary students.

A MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING FOR HUMANE ORGANIZATIONS AND VETERINARIANS

(Adopted by the American Humane Association and the American Veterinary Medical Association in 1982. This document supersedes the Memorandum of Understanding adopted in 1973 and its predecessor adopted in 1960.)

Veterinary medical associations and humane organizations have a common bond or purpose in the preservation of the life, health, and general well-being of animals of all species. Each has its appointed task in the field of animal welfare: the veterinarian diagnosing and prescribing the treatment and conservation of the life and well-being of animals; humane organizations working for the protection, relief, and comfort of animals.

1. Veterinary associations and humane organizations should try to promote the health and welfare of animals through mutually cooperative endeavors.
2. Each group should strive to understand and respect the other's viewpoints and differences of opinion in reaching their mutual goals. Respectful disagreement on some issues should not be allowed to interfere with cooperation in matters on which there is agreement.
3. To promote understanding and cooperation, liaison should be maintained between organized veterinary medicine and humane organizations at the local, state, and national levels. To that end, liaison committees at each level might serve most effectively to assure communication between the two groups and to hear grievances that might be referred by either the veterinary medical associations or the humane organizations.
4. Veterinarians are encouraged to participate in humane activities through membership and active participation in local humane organizations.
5. Veterinary medical associations and humane organizations should, through published literature and individual counseling by their members, promote responsible pet ownership on proper, humane care of all animals. The public should be urged to consult licensed veterinarians in matters that require veterinary skill and knowledge, and to report to the humane organization any observed instances of abuse or inhumane treatment of animals.
6. Throughout the United States, the existence of well-equipped private animal hospitals provides an excellent opportunity to extend charitable veterinary service to those who need it through mutual cooperation between local veterinary medical associations and humane organizations.
7. Local veterinarians and veterinary associations are encouraged to provide veterinary service to animal shelters at a mutually agreeable fee. Individual veterinarians should decide whether to participate with humane organizations to provide special plans or services such as health examinations for adopted pets, surgical neutering, or vaccinations. Such plans and services when agreed upon should provide that the attending veterinarian will have freedom of medical judgment regarding the patients' needs. The veterinarians' decisions and actions should conform to accepted veterinary practice and with the codes of ethics of local, state, and national veterinary associations. The humane organization should recognize these constraints and not expect the veterinarian to violate the ethical codes.
8. As with other clients, when each patient is presented for care, the veterinarian should confer with the responsible humane organization official and explain the diagnosis, recommended and optional therapy, prognosis, and estimated cost. The responsible official, as the client, should select from the options (including euthanasia) and authorize the veterinarian to proceed. The two parties should consult periodically on the progress of each case to preclude misunderstandings on the extent of care or the fees incurred.
9. In agreements between humane organizations and private veterinarians, the veterinarian is knowledgeable of his or her expenses and is able to determine and negotiate the appropriate fees for services. A veterinarian who agrees to provide services for a reduced fee or without compensation must not render less than the usual high quality of service that would be provided for the full fee. The scope of professional services and detailed arrangements to provide those services should be worked out to the mutual satisfaction of the humane organization and veterinarians concerned. All such programs should consider sanitation, disease and parasite control, immunizations, and health examinations.

GUIDELINES FOR VETERINARY ASSOCIATIONS AND VETERINARIANS WORKING WITH HUMANE ORGANIZATIONS

(Adopted by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1983)

Statement of Position

Veterinary medical associations, veterinarians, and humane organizations have a common bond through their work with animals. Beyond this common bond is a desire for, and serious interest in, good husbandry, quality of care, and the welfare of animals.

Veterinary and humane organizations, using their special skills, must decide on ways that they can work together toward the things that are important to each of them.

The groups must work to understand and respect each other's differences of opinion in reaching these goals. Respectful disagreement on a few issues must not be allowed to interfere with cooperation on the many issues on which there is agreement. Finally, the veterinarian must, through word and deed, promote a responsible ownership and care for all animals.

Recommendations To Veterinarians and Veterinary Associations

It is recommended that veterinary associations and individual veterinarians participate in humane organizations' activities. This can be best accomplished through membership and active participation in humane organizations and by offering advice, professional services, and skills that the veterinarians possess.

These professional skills and services must be offered to local, state, and national levels of the humane organization in order to insure a coordinated effort, and maintain communication. When offering professional services to such organizations, a veterinarian's decisions and actions must conform not only to accepted standards of veterinary practice, but with the code of ethics of local, state, and national veterinary associations, as well.

Individual veterinarians must decide for themselves whether or not to participate with humane organizations to produce special plans and/or services, such as health examinations, surgery, immunizations, and/or advice on such matters as sanitation, disease control, parasite control, and others. The scope of professional services and detailed arrangements to provide these services must be worked out in advance to the mutual satisfaction of the humane organization and the veterinarian concerned. Such plans and professional servies, when agreed upon, must give the veterinarian the responsibility for making the medical judgments regarding the patient's needs.

Normally, following presentation of an animal for evaluation and care, the veterinarian must confer with the owner or his or her agent, explain the diagnosis, recommend optional methods of treatment, if any, offer a prognosis, and discuss the anticipated cost of treatment. The same procedure must be followed when rendering service to a humane organization in that the authorized official becomes the client and becomes solely responsible for making decisions after all aspects of the case are presented. The two parties should consult periodically on the progress of each case to preclude misunderstandings on the extent of care, or the fees incurred.

Fees for services are to be determined by the veterinarian and the humane organization as negotiable items. Regardless of the fee, the veterinarian must not render less than the usual high quality of service that would be provided for the regular fee.

NOTES FOR POTENTIAL USERS OF THE STANDARD CONSENT FORM

(Not to be printed as part of the form)

1) It should be understood that this form will not protect the veterinarian from liability for malpractice (negligence). Releases from liability for malpractice, executed by a patient prior to the occurrence of the negligent act, are generally disfavored by the courts. The proposed form is designed merely to protect the veterinarian from liability for intentional acts such as interference with another's property, which means, in fact, permission to do the operation(s) or procedure(s).
2) When more than one veterinarian is involved in the practice, the name of the hospital or clinic should be shown as well as the name of the individual veterinarian. If the number of veterinarians in a clinic or hospital is few enough to make it practical, all consents should be addressed not only to the hospital and clinic and the individual veterinarian, but also the other veterinarians practicing in the clinic as partners or otherwise. Where appropriate, such information should be preprinted.
3) The description of the procedures should be brief but sufficiently comprehensive to cover the situation.
4) If euthanasia is involved, the veterinarian should be sure that the person signing the form clearly understands the meaning of the term.
5) Users may omit any part of this form with which they disagree.

PEER REVIEW PROCEDURE MANUAL

Prepared by the Council on Veterinary Service
(Adopted by the AVMA House of Delegates, 1983)

PREFACE

It is essential not only that justice be done: it must be perceived to have been done. Acting justly, and demonstrating that one has done so, is something every person of good intentions wishes to do. Professional persons assume this obligation in a special way.

The veterinarian has always been expected to be sensitive to any uncertainty or misgivings exhibited by a client during treatment of his or her animal and to be willing to discuss explicit complaints. Veterinarians are concerned, for both professional and personal reasons, that clients leave their offices well satisfied.

Each year, there are innumerable veterinarian-client encounters. As veterinary care delivery has grown more complex, informal methods of resolving misunderstandings are not always sufficient. Consequently, a more formal method of response has been developed - peer review.

Peer review in its simplest terms is a mechanism by which the veterinary profession demonstrates the appropriateness and quality of the care it renders. It provides an expert and credible system for resolving disagreements that cannot be resolved at an earlier, more informal stage. It may be carried out by ethics or grievance committees of local or state associations or by more formal peer review boards established by those same associations. All such committees or boards shall be discussed here as a single entity.

Clients must be aware of the existence and availability of peer review and of its use. The finest mechanism is worthless if no one knows it is there.

Peer review is expert because men and women with appropriate professional credentials help conduct the hearings, review the evidence, and make objective decisions and recommendations based on the findings.

It is credible because its rules and procedures are clearly set forth and afford an equal opportunity for each participant to be fully heard. (In the view of many, the presence of a nonveterinarian on the committee greatly enhances this credibility.) Nonveterinarian representatives should serve in an advisory capacity in the evaluation of procedures and mechanisms for fair and equitable resolution of disagreements.

There are a few things that peer review is not. It is not a court of law. It is neither an adversary proceeding nor a punitive expedition. It is there to help educate, adjudicate, clarify, and make corrections where necessary.

Peer review is voluntary. However, those using its services should be asked to abide by its findings. It is important, then, for peer review to work well so that people who need its services will voluntarily seek them and will want to abide by the outcome. The strength of peer review is derived entirely from its ability to function effectively and fairly. If the concept or peer review is neither new nor terribly complex, why is a manual necessary? Primarily for two reasons.

First, to suggest procedures that can be adopted to help ensure the success of the system.

Second, there are so many professional groups involved in veterinary care, which are potential participants in peer review, that there needs to be some reasonable degree of uniformity in the process as one observes it from community to community and from state to state.

This manual was developed within the guidelines of established policies of the American Veterinary Medical Association. It is an attempt to assist the component and constituent society jointly to create an operative peer review system as quickly and efficiently as possible.

Peer review may seem to be a difficult undertaking in theory, but, once tried, it will quickly become comfortable and simple.

There are a number of reasons why the veterinary profession needs to expand and perfect its peer review system. None is more important, however, than peer review's potential for demonstrating publicly the excellent care veterinarians provide to their patients and the initiative the profession takes to correct problems which may arise.

PURPOSE

A peer review committee is established within a local, regional, or state veterinary association to review matters concerning, but not limited to, appropriateness of care and quality of treatment. Acting in an advisory capacity, it may also address fees. A committee may act on appropriate requests initiated by clients, veterinarians, or insurance carriers.

RESPONSIBILITY

It is the responsibility of a peer review committee to explore to the extent necessary all matters referred to it and to do so within a period of time that makes its efforts effective. Its means of communication may vary as the situation warrants. A peer review committee has an equal responsibility to clients, veterinarians, and insurance carriers.

MATTERS FOR REVIEW

Appropriateness of Care: The peer review committee shall determine the professional acceptability of planned or completed treatments to include necessity and consistency with diagnosis.

Quality of Treatment: An evaluation of the skill with which a treatment is provided in light of the standards which generally prevail within the profession by those who routinely perform the treatment in question, as judged by competent practitioners who are qualified to perform the procedure.

Fees: The Committee may determine from the evidence made available to it whether the fee in question is the veterinarian's usual fee for a given procedure. If the fee being charged appears not to be the veterinarian's usual fee, the Committee then can determine whether the fee is reasonable considering the degree of difficulty or complexity of the veterinary procedure employed. The Committee should not use a fee schedule or survey, or make any findings respecting what the customary fee in the geographic area may be for any particular procedure, since such activity could have antitrust implications.

MEMBERSHIP

It is essential that veterinary associations' peer review committees be reasonably uniform in both structure and procedure because the effect of their actions may have regional or national implications.

A peer review committee is composed of licensed veterinarians well respected in their professional community. It should include members representing a cross section of veterinarians in age, species expertise, and experience. Veterinary associations are encouraged to include a well-respected nonveterinarian as a resource to their peer review committees.

The size of the peer review committee should reflect the geographic area covered, the veterinary population of the association, and the potential patient/client caseload. There should, in all cases, be at least three members.

Members should serve staggered terms of three years to assure continuity of experience.

No member of a veterinary association body responsible for hearing appeals should serve on a component committee because of the potential conflict of interest in hearing such appeals. Whenever possible, veterinary association officers should not serve on the committee.

If a committee feels the need for additional expertise in order to render a proper judgment in a particular case, the chairman may appoint additional members to hear that case. These appointed members have the same status, in that instance, as do permanent members of the committee.

If a veterinarian who limits his or her practice is being reviewed, he or she may require the chairman to obtain a panel of other similarly experienced practitioners from the association membership or from the appropriate specialty organization. This panel, together with the chairman or vice chairman or designated member, will comprise the review committee in this instance.

Any party involved may, prior to the review, ask to be informed of the members composing the committee hearing the case. Any party involved may submit a properly documented request that the chairman excuse a committee member for cause. Another may be appointed to take the place of the excused member for the deliberation in question. The chairman, with the advice of the committee, should be empowered to accept or reject this request, giving the reasons for such action.

GEOGRAPHIC JURISDICTION

Cases are heard within the jurisdiction of the veterinary association where the service in question has been or will be performed. If the local veterinary association fails to act on a case within a reasonable length of time, and the state veterinary association has made every effort to assure review at the local level, then the state association peer review committee should hear that case.

PROCEDURE AND LIMITATION

Generally, mediation is the initial step a committee takes in attempting to resolve differences. If efforts to mediate prove unsuccessful, the case is deferred to the peer review committee for full review. Following that review, the committee reaches a decision based on its factual findings and transmits its decision to all participants.

Licensed veterinarians practicing in the state, their clients, insurance carriers, and governmental agencies, should all be encouraged to utilize peer review when appropriate.

A peer review committee has no disciplinary powers of itself. However, in cases involving habitual offenders, the committee may recommend continuing educational courses. It is not within the scope of such a committee to consider cases in litigation.

METHOD FOR REQUESTING A REVIEW

Any party wishing to initiate review must make the request in writing to the appropriate local or state veterinary association. A request for review should be accompanied by supporting records and pertinent information, stating the specific questions to be answered. Such reviews should be conducted at the lowest level association which provides peer review.

If an insurance carrier questions a claim form, the veterinarian's office should be contacted first by the carrier for clarification. If the problem cannot be resolved between the parties, it can then be referred to the peer review committee of the state veterinary association for review. When the insurance carrier makes the request in writing, it must include documentation that attempts to resolve the problem have been made without success. After receiving the request, the state or local veterinary association determines if it is eligible for review, then refers it to the appropriate peer review committee.

Mediation: When a request for review is received by a peer review committee, the chairman appoints one member to act as mediator. The mediator considers the request to determine whether the requesting party has fulfilled its resonsibility to attempt to resolve the differences.

The mediator then contacts all parties involved and tries to reconcile differences. The mediator carefully documents all contacts with clients, veterinarians, and carriers. In no circumstances does the mediator examine a patient.

If the case is resolved by the mediator, the mediator submits a written report to the chairman and the case is closed. If mediation is not successful, the mediator informs the chairman by written report. (Refer to Appendix 2).

Pre-review procedure: If a veterinarian providing specialty care is being reviewed, the veterinarian may require that the peer review committee chairman appoint a special panel of at least three specialists from the appropriate specialty organization or three members of the local or state association who have similar experience. (Each specialty organization determines how the specialty panel is to be selected.) The committee chairman, or his designate, joins the specialty panel in reviewing the case. Alternatively, the peer review committee can also request such an arrangement if it does not feel itself sufficiently knowledgeable in the specialty area to make the necessary decisions.

Clinical examination of patient: If the committee feels that a clinical examination is necessary, the client is asked to sign a form giving permission for the examination prior to the review (see Appendix 4). The client's veterinarian is notified that the examination is to take place (see Appendix 5). The findings are not discussed with the client at the time of the examination. If the committee decides that a clinical examination is necessary in order to render a decision, but the client withholds permission for the examination, the review is terminated with a written explanation of the reason for the termination given to all parties.

COMMUNICATIONS AND RECORD KEEPING

Communications: It is suggested that the peer review committee report its decisions and/or recommendations in writing within 60 days of the initiation of review to all parties concerned. It is recommended that, during each step of the review process, all letters and documents be stamped confidential and copies be sent to the executive offices of the state or local veterinary association. All phone conversations and informal discussions should be well documented, dated, and retained by the chairman of the peer review committee. Contents of all cases should be kept in strictest confidence.

The committee, in writing, informs all parties involved of their right to appeal its decisions.

A committee report should take note of cases of noncooperation by an involved veterinarian.

How a Review is conducted: The mediator makes his or her report to the committee and leaves. Each party is then interviewed separately by the committee.

Peer review is intended to be a mediation process. Because peer review is not a court of law, it is recommended that attorneys not be present at a review and that no verbatim report of the proceedings be made. The committee reaches a decision in closed session and writes a report (see Appendix 7).

THE COMMITTEE'S REPORT

A majority vote constitutes the decision of the peer review committee. Written minority opinions are permitted and should be included with the committee's final report.

The report should be specific with respect to the question raised and not include extraneous or unnecessary comment.

All parties are notified in writing of the committee's decision and recommendations with an explanation of the right to appeal (see Appendix 8). Copies of the committee's report and of all pertinent data should be forwarded to the parent association's executive offices. Contents of all cases should be kept in strictest confidence and be retained for the period of time advised by legal counsel.

APPEAL OF THE COMMITTEE'S DECISION

A decision can be appealed within 30 days, with the party initiating the appeal required to show cause why an appeal is justified. An appeal is justified if it can be shown that proper procedure was not followed, that information not available at the time of review has been developed, or that a decision was made that, on the face of it, ran counter to the evidence and testimony presented.

All parties have the right to appeal a decision of the committee when any of the previous conditions are alleged.

The request for appeal of a peer review committee decision should be sent in writing to the chief elected officer of the parent association. Such requests should specify and document the basis on which the appeal is requested in conformance with the three reasons for appeal listed above.

Decisions of local association peer review committees will be referred to the peer review committee of the next higher level association within the state's hierarchy of veterinary associations. For example, decisions of local association peer review committees may be appealed to a regional association, if one exists, or, lacking an intermediate association, it may be appealed directly to the state association's peer review committee.

APPEAL OF A DECISION BY A LOCAL ASSOCIATION PEER REVIEW COMMITTEE

The chief elected officer of the local association will assure that all of the documentation necessary to the appeal is present, and forward the request for appeal to the chairman of the peer review committee of the next higher echelon veterinary association in the state's hierarchy. The regional or state peer review committee will review the case and the appeal request and will decide whether or not the appeal is justified. The committee may: 1) reject the appeal as unwarranted and allow the original decision to stand; 2) hear the appeal case offering all parties to the decision the opportunity to present information.

APPEAL OF A DECISION BY THE STATE ASSOCIATION PEER REVIEW COMMITTEE

If a decision by the state association's peer review committee is appealed, the chief elected officer of the state, on receiving the request for appeal, will initiate an investigation of the appeal by the executive board of the state association. The executive board will review all of the facts of the case and the request for appeal and determine what further action is appropriate. The three most common alternative decisions available to the board are: 1) appeal is unwarranted and the challenged decision stands; 2) the case is sent back to the peer review committee for re-review, if the initial review is considered inadequate or incomplete; or 3) the executive board agrees to hear the appeal case.

The decision of the executive board is final within the peer review context.

CASES INVOLVING NONMEMBER VETERINARIANS

Because the state veterinary association has a responsibility to both the public and the veterinary profession, veterinarians who are not members of their state or local associations should be notified that they may also participate in peer review. This includes review at their request, the request of a client, or the request of a third party. Non-members being reviewed should agree to the review in writing.

PEER REVIEW LIABILITY LAW

State, regional, and local associations should purchase liability insurance for all members participating in peer review committees.

An effort should be made to pass a peer review liability law in each state legislature. The sample law that follows is a guide, not necessarily a model. It does, however, contain elements which might be included when drafting a law for each state. Each association is strongly advised to seek legal advice on the appropriate format for its jurisdiction.

SAMPLE LAW

No member of a veterinary peer review committee of a state or local veterinary association shall be deemed liable in damages to any person for any action taken or recommendation made within the scope of the functions of such committee, if such committee member acts without malice and in reasonable belief that such action or recommendation is warranted by the facts known to him after reasonable effort to obtain the facts of the matter as to which such action or recommendation is made.

The veterinary peer review committee and its records shall be exempt from discovery proceedings.
